Subsequently, while the parties were yet within the court house, the complainant was again attacked by his former assaliants, but no action was taken to bring them to justice. It is alleged that the discharged firemen are members of a political club in the seventh ward, and have heretofore enjoyed considerable latitude during election times. ## MARRIAGE OF THE DANISH MINISTER.

Mr. de Bille, Minister Pienspotentiary from Denmark, was married at noon yesterday to Miss S. Zabriskie, of Jersey City, daughter of Chancellor A BRILLIANT METROR.—At fifty-three minutes after two o'clock yesterday morning a large yeilow meteor, brighter than Sirius, shot into the atmosphere at a point about fifty degrees above the northcast horizon, and after moving in a northwesterly direction over

At the License flureau yesterday among the many cases of interest was one of Mr. Truxell, of Salem, Va., who was deeced out of $190 by the sharps of No. 110 West street. It is certainly strange that intelligent men who read the papers and are supposed to be well posted can be lured into the infamous dens which abound in this city and tend money to strangers or imagine that for a dollar or two they are to get a large quantity of beautiful jewelry. Mr. with so much earnestness as to cause a listener to smile in spite of himself. He met a nice young man on one of the Jersey City ferryboats and they went together to the jewelry store No. 110 West street. Presently the proprietor of the store commenced throwing the cards about and induced Mr. Truxell's new found friend (?) to bet that he could pick out a certain card. He lost his money, but he knew just where the card was, and if he had a little more money he could point right to it. Oh, he was surof it. Mr. Truxell had some money and he tonned his "friend" $100, but the friend did not succeed in his "friend" $100, but the friend did not succeed in finding the right card. Well, he kept on borrowing and losing intri he had obtained from Mr. Truxell $190. Then they both left together. His "friend" said they might get some referss by applying at the poitee office, and he volunteered to go and see about the matter, and left Mr. Truxell to water the place. After some time the irriend returned and stated that he had seen the police "master" and the police "master" had fined him $150 for going into a gambling saloon. Mr. Truxell tool his "friend" he had no money left to go home with, and the after kindly loaned him ten dollars. He then told the story to some person, who advised him to call at the Mayor's office and see Marshal Tooker, which he did accordingly.

office and see Marshal Tooker, which he did accordingly.

Marshal Tooker told Mr. Truxell that he ought have known that he was to be swindled when he went into the establishment, and he requested him to tell all his friends that all of those jewelry shops which abound on West and Cortlandt and other streets are swindling establishments of the worst kind.

An officer was despatched with the complainant, who succeeded in obtaining $130, which, together with the ten dollars previously "lent" the complainant, was all the shopkeepers would allow. Mr. Truxel was satisfied to get even that much and allow the other fifty dollars to go toward leeding "the elephant."

An MIXTURE OF SHYLOCK AND FAGIN

Truxen was satisfied to get even that much and allow the other fifty dollars to go toward needing "the elephant."

A MIXTURE OF SHYLOCK AND FAGIN was seen at the Marshal's office yesterday in the person of an antiquated Hebrew from No. 31 Warren street. The anti-porker was summoned at the complaint of a Mrs. Reilly, who had made a lot of pants for the ancient Israelite at the hamense sum of twenty cents a pair. The ancient it appears refused to pay for the work because in some small particulars it was not as well done as he said it should have been. Mrs. Reilly agreed to take the pants again and do what was required to make them as good as he wanted them to be. The aloresaid Israelite, addressing the Marshal, said, with a peculiar shrug:—"Ugh now shentleman zee. Dose bants dey is nod fitable to zell. I bays her den zents a bair and I loose de rest mysellif. Ven I gif dose bants do her do maik den zhe gif dem by zumbowdy elits, and de boddoms dey is bad maid and de waisis dey is bad maid and the perfect of the particular of the particular shrug. Mrs. Reilly—Ten cents a pair, and it cost me thirty-six cents for thread and eighty cents for help. I'm willing to take them and do what is needed.

Mr. Israelite—Vell, shentleman, ef I gif dose bants den I vants de secoority vur den, ellis odders I gif dat den zents a bair."

Marshai Tooker ordered him to settle with the woman, and the gent with the Shylock-Fagin "make up" departed with a "goot py, shentleman, goot py."

UNITARIAN CONFERENCE.

Sermon by Dr. Cheney, of Boston. The Conference of Unitarian churches was inaugurated last evening at the Church of the Messiah, corner of Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue, by a sermon from Rev. Dr. Cheney, of Boston. The congregation was small. This morning, however, when the regular business of the Conference commences, in the chapel attached to the church, the attendance, it is to be presumed, will be much larger. Dr. Cheit is to be presumed, will be much larger. Dr. Chency made an eloquent and effective discourse upon the duties, responsibilities and proper mission of Unitarianism. He said that for a long time they had utite else than a local celebrity, but that a new and glorious inspiration of Unitarianism had developed itself of late and simed to encircle the earth in its mission of Unitarianism had developed itself of late and simed to encircle the earth in its mission of Unitarianism that was most desired in the work of rendering Unitarianism the great religion which its founders and followers sought to make it was the agreement of common consent, the unanimity of thought and action without which it was fruitless to expect lasting success. If all the churches in the Unitarian faith worked together in that spirit of unity and harmony which constitutes the first vital principle of the reigion which they teach the fruits would be great and many. Romanism is the chief religion of Christendom which shows this harmony and unity of action directed to a common end, and which catches at every and to promote its one grand object white employing a rigid discipline to compel fealty and obedience. Unitarianism needs none of the machinery which Romanism medis none of the machinery which Romanism medis none of the machinery which Romanism is mission one of the machinery which Romanism is made to the giory, elevation and perfection of the faith. These conferences, which are held annually, are in a great measure the means to this end. They frame a plan which all can adopt, and which when acted upon develops that latent strength of religious feeling which gives to any church its support and impetus. Those secular features which have been incorporated in the practice of Unitarianism have been productive of great good. Nothing could be deemed irregular ney made an eloquent and effective discourse upon which by its narmonizing influence brought the spirits of men to a better understanding with their circutor. It it be necessary to touch men through the medium of their hearts to reach the domain sprans of spiritual feeling in their maurea, such a course has oftentimes to be adopted, not exactly in conformity with the formal methods of the Cherch. The proper exercise of humanity has much to do with true religion. It will win souls to Christ when all other means fail, and is generally the most lasting in its influence. After the sermon several hymna were sung and the congregation departed.

THE STRIKE OF THE CAR DRIVERS.

The Time Tables Turned—The President of the Second Avenue Railroad Again Van-quished—The Drivers Masters of the Situation—Terms of Capitulation.

Rostnities broke out afresh on Monday morning between Mr. Montgomery Queen and those irre-pressible employes of his, the car drivers of the second Avenue Bailroad. The cause of war was another of those opnoxious time tables which, hough wonderful specimens of ingenious figuring calculated to excite the admiration of mankind as an arithmetician and manager of city railroads, has failed to inspire the unap-preciative drivers with any other feeling than In other words, they don't seem to see it. Logic, that is, Mr. Queen's togic, goes for nothing with them, and his arguments to demonstrate "that it is all for their good" have failed to convince these sceptical Jehas. Consequently they rebelled, the time table, that telerripus cause belt, without increasing the number of trips to be run by the drivers, extended the time that the men were required to be on duty, thus greatly diminishing the "swinging time," as it is technically called, that is, the recess from work which is allowed the drivers. This "swinging time" is materially shortened, the men claim, by this last time table, which would compet them to work from fourteen to eighteen hours in making the seven trips. Car No. 44, for instance, starts at ten minutes nest in the morning and stops at half-past two A. M., making sixteen hours and thirty-six minutes of unremitting work. An extra trip was also required to be run at night, and before beginning work the conductors and drivers were required to report a quarter of an hour carlier than "that it is all for their good" have failed to convince

As soon as the announcement of the new time table was made a grand council of war was held by the drivers, and the dements of the obnoxious docu-ment and its author were freely canvassed. Mr. Queen's name was coupled with epithets the reverse of complimentary, and his time table was scoated and condemed.

"Ab, the mane, chain' old blayguard," exclaimed one "its thrying to get the best of us he is, pre-and condemned.

"Ab, the mane, chaim' old blayguard," exclaimed one, "its thrying to get the best of us he is, pretendin' to be frindly, and tellin, us its all for our good, and all the time he's working the flesh off our bones and we only gettin' two dollars a day."

"Thrue for you, Bill," said another; "two dollars a day is no pay at all for the work we do. It is too hard aiready, and two fifty a day wouldn't hall pay for it, and now he wants to put more on us."

"I'll tell you what it is, bovs," broke in another, "we'll have to stop this business right here and let old Quin know that he can't impose on us any longer. I'd see him d—d before I'd work for him. If he thinks he can run this thing as he did in Brooklyn he'll find himself mistaken."

Some of the men went to work in the morning, but by two o'clock all had knocked off and not a car was running. To an inquiry as to the cause of some of the drivers resuming work in the morning when there was a unanimity of feeling among the strikers in regard to the injustice of the new time table one of the men responded, "You see, sir, we didn't want to put Yank Murply in the hoie; he's the night foreman, and a clever feller and kind to the men; he asked us to drive and we didn't like to refuse." This Yank Murply seems to be a great favorite with the men, who call him "Yank" or "good natured Murph," as the case may be.

Mr. Queen has discharged a good many of the me concerned in the late strike, which has caused considerable indignation against him. One of the decapitated is an old man named Alexander Glass, who has been in the company's service four teen years.

capitated is an old man hamed Alexander class, who has been in the company's service fourteen years.

At about two o'clock Mr. Queen emerged from the office, on the corner of Sixty-fourth street, and harangued the drivers assembled about the depot. His arguments, however, failed to convince them, and they refused to return to duty. A committee of three of their number was appointed to confer with the officers of the company and urge the injustice of Mr. Queen's demands. Yesterday moraing the drivers were informed that a new time table agreeable to their wishes would be made, and that in the mean time the cars would be run according to the old able, and no extra work or time would be put upon them. They were also informed that their wages were increased to $2.50 a day. When this announcement was made the men applanded vociferously, and soon after returned to work, so that the cars are now running as usual.

This concession on the part of the company is said to have been made by Judge Slosson, one of the directors. The men state that they have been promised by the company that no more men shall be discharged by Mr. Queen for participation in the late strike.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT-IN ADMIRALTY. The Collision Between the Sylvan Stream and Before Judge Benedict.

The Harlem and New York Transportation Company vs. The Steamboat State of New York .- The ollowing decision was rendered in this case yester-

This was a cause of collision instituted by the owners of the steamboat Sylvan Stream against the steamboat State of New York to recover the damages sustained by the former vessel in a collision which occurred in the East river on the afternoon of the 13th day of January, 1867. The Sylvan Stream is one of the fast steamers which make hourly trips petween nier 24 East river and make hourly trips between pier 24 East river and liarlem, and the Nate of New York is a South steamer, whose best him a count of the State of New Stream Art when the the sylvan Stream artives at pier 27, and when the tide is dood she at that hour lands at the end of the pier, with her head down stream. To avoid embarrassing each other it has been the practice between these two boats, that when upon the four o'clock trip the Harlem boat arrives near pier 24 before the State of New York has commenced to move out of her berth she stops a pier or two above pier 24 to allow the State of New York to pass out ahead of her if ready to move. If the State of New York to pass out ahead of her if ready to move. If the State of New York to pass out ahead of her if ready to move. If the State of New York are sent pier before the State of New York has storm arrived before the State of New York had started, and, in accordance with the usage, stopped off pier 27, and, as she says, blew her whistie to call the attention of the State of New York had started, and, in accordance with the usage, stopped off pier 27, and, as she says, blew her whistie to call the attention of the State of New York to her presence. The State of New York that he pier before the State of New York that the Sylvan Stream started again to make her landing. But soon after she had begun to move out to was, not now york that the Sylvan Stream had allowed the state of New York was at once stopped and reversed; but before her headway could be entirely stopped she struck the Sylvan Stream a souare blow upon the end of the pier, but being upon the shatin caused an injury to the engine of the State of New York was at once stopped and reversed; but before her headway could be entirely stopped she struck the Sylvan Stream as souare blow upon the end of the pier, but being upon the shatin caused an injury to the engine of the State of New York was barely moving, her stern not being over three feet outside the end of the pier, but being upon the shatin to assed an inj sea, but of one vessel departing from the side of a pier, at the end of which the other was to land. The vessels were passonger boats, cunning by time tables, and certainly so far as the Sylvan Stream was concerned, competied to make landings rapidly, as the State of New York knew. The State of New York had the opportunity given her to make her departure first; not being ready to do so, site was bound to wast quietly till the Sylvan Stream had made her landing, and having failed to do so she should be neld solely responsible for the collision, even if it were true that the Stream by abandoning her landing could have escaped the danger which the famil of the State of New York had thrust upon her. She was not bound to abandon her landing, but had the right to keep on and rely unon the State of New York's stopping in time to avoid her. The rule as laid down awa applicable to vessels situated as these two vessels were, seem to me necessary to avoid constant danger and controversy and one which will work injustice to no one. The decree must accordingly be for libellant, with a reference to ascertain the amonnt.

The police were not called out, but if intimidation be resorted to the strikers may soon be assured in an unpleasant way that the Grand Jury are in session.

CHANGES ON THE ERIE RAILWAY.—Mr. L. D. Rucker has been apointed (General Superminguient)

Rucker has been appointed General Superintendent of the Erie Ratiway, in placetof Mr. H. Riddle, resigned. The troubles arose from a rivairy and conflict of authority between the superintendents of the different divisions. Mr. Rucker was superintendent of the Atlantic and Great Western division of the Erie Ratiway, and he has now authority over all the division superintendents. The mutterings of dissatisfaction at tris change are andible in every department of the ratiway. Before the close of the next month a sweeping change will have been effected. Mr. Charles W. Doughass, superintendent of the Delaware division, also tendered his resignation, and he is succeeded by Mr. George Reddington, formerly of the Milwaukee and St. Paul Ratiroad. The difficulty in this case may be traced to the same source as the other. One of the most responsible officers on the road has drawn up his resignation, and only awaits such an opportunity as will be afforded by a peremptory order from the new superintendent to tender it. MAYOR SAWYER'S MESSAGE—FILTHY CONDITION
OF THE ROADS.—Some excellent suggestions are contained in the message of Mayor Sawyer to the new Common Council. He adverts to the paramount blessing of education, and recommends an increased appropriation for public schools. His remarks on tence the fitthy condition of Newark avenue and Hoboken avenue, the two great thoroughfares leading from the hill to Jersey City and Hoboken, are halled with general sausfaction. He urges the Council carnestly to take this matter in hand, and by providing a decont road, as suggested, unvite autanters to come up on the hill and make their abode there, while the city will be saved the reproach of enjoying con-testedly a state of things which is justly regarded as an abomination.

JUDGE HEBLE'S CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY .- At the opening of the Hudson county courts yesterday morning Judge Bedle called the attention of the morning Judge Bedle called the attention of the Grand Jury to the frequent use of knives and pistels, nuisances, abortions and ill-repaired roads and streets. The use of knives and pistels was becoming too frequent, and it could be pit down by a firm administration of the law. The notion that men when attacked can draw a knife or a pistol was erroneous. The law lays down distinctly that the delence should be proportionate to the attack. Every man who uses a dangerous weapon in a fight not absolutely necessary for self-defence is indictable. In reference to abortion, which is charged against three of the prisoners, the statute prescribes, in case the woman dies, a fine of $1,000 or fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor. Even if the person should not die, the offender is liable to a penalty of $500 or seven years tuprisonment. Should it be ascertained that the Child was quick (which, as far as the Court was informed, was not so in this instance), the offence became more serious and additional connact would be needed. The fithly condition of the roads, especially those leading to Jersey (try and Hoboken, was also a serious matter for their consideration and they should investigate it. Parties charged with the repairs of highways or streets are bound to perform that work, under penalty of indictment.

Homicipe—Fatal Risulir of an Apprax.—Yesterday morning James Donegan who was injured in an afray on Sunday afternoon, in a fight at the corner of Johnson and Navy streets, died at the Brooklyn City Hospital. He leaves a wife aid six children at his residence in Nassau street. Thomas Kilimade, who was struck on the head with a club in this affray, lies in a very critical condition at his residence in Tillary street. Coroner Jones proceeded to the hospital to take the ame-morten deposition of the injured man, but he stated that he did not think he was going to die. He however stated the circumstances of the affray to the Coroner, sayingl that when he was passing the corner of Johnson and Navy streets, on Sunday evening, he saw some parties fighting, and he went across the street to separate them. When he was returning one of the parties followed him and he said Berry looked very like the man who stabbed him, and he thought he would be willing to swear it was him. The deceased tated before his death that the man who stabbed him was of low stature and had a light com plexion. This corresponded with the description of the prisoner, and he was remanded to jail to await the result of the Coroner's honestigating. The continued at his work all day vesterday afternoon. James Howard, a clerk by occupation, was also arrested by the police of the forty fourtil precinct, on charge of participating in the affray.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

The first match game of the season on the Union grounds came off yesterday, the Mutual and Olympic clubs being the contestants. The weather, although fine, was, owing to the high and cold wind which prevailed, rather adverse to any fine exhibition of ball play. The Mutual nine, with the exception of McMahon, were on hand, but their performances ball play. The Mutual nine, with the exception of McMahon, were on hand, but their performances generally were not as an fait as might be expected from the cnampions. Hatfield made two beautiful misses of fly balls which came into his hands, and several displays of mutilinam were made by others of the nine. Wolters pitched very well and Milis caught in really excellent style. Some good playing was shown by Milis on first base, Flanley on second and Swandell on third. R. Hunt at centre field did some good work, as did also Eggler at short. The platter, however, is certainly out of his place, and his exhibitions at centre field last year demonstrate unmistakably that he should be kept there. Of the Olympics McGrath at centre field deserves certainly most praise for general play. The new bitcher whom the Olympics have secured proved very effective, but his style can be vastly improved. He risked accuracy to speed, and by that means alone gave his opponents much advantage. He has another fault which some of the Mutuals were not slow to take advantage of. In drawing back his arm to deliver the ball he moves so slowly and makes so many motions that the base runner could at most times be well on his way to the next base before the delivery of the ball, and then by the irregularity of his delivery and the anxiety on the part of the catcher to watch the players running the bases and attemptio hop around for the ball at the same time innumerable "passed balls" gave the runners opportunities to go further on their journey toward "home." In this regard, of course, improvements can be made by practice. The Olympics were three men short and, therefore, played under somewhat of a disalvantage. It is scarcely just, however, to deede on the merits of the play from yesterday's exhibition on either side as the wind chilled the players so much as almost to unnerve them. The Young olympics did as well as they expected in scoring eight to the Mutual's thirty-eight, and showed that they possess good material and may ere the end of th
